Pointers Offered for Gas Range Use

Versatile cooking features mark important advantages of today's modern kitchen. Do be sure to use these features to their fullest—they're there to aid you! Here are a few pointers often missed, yet so helpful when it comes to using late model gas ranges.

1. Remember that any combination of foods may be cooked at once in your gas oven — the fresh air won't permit intermingling of flavors.

2. If two foods requiring different temperatures are cooked at once, you may either choose the temperature of the most critical food and vary the time of the other food or choose a temperature between those called for in the recipes.

3. In built-in gas ranges, roasting cooking may be done at the same temperature as that of food cooking in the oven. The flame cooks the roasting meat while the indirect heat in the oven may be cooking a pie, cake, casserole, etc. The oven temperature makes little difference to the cooking meat.

4. Casseroles, baked potatoes, etc. may be kept warm while broiling is taking place in a built-in gas range broiler by placing them below the broiler pan.

5. The automatic top burner may be used to keep food warm (use temperatures of 175 deg.) after cooking or to cook food that is usually done in the oven or automatic skillet.

6. Whenever you plan to be away from home in the afternoon set the automatic controls for the oven to turn on and start cooking dinner while you're away. If you're lucky enough to have a "program cooking" control, the oven will automatically turn to a keep warm setting after the cooking is completed.

7. An aid in organizing a party is the "lo-temp" setting on nearly all late-model gas ranges. Have the food cooked and on serving plates in the oven set at 170 deg. Clean up all cooking utensils and when you're ready to serve dinner (even 3 to 4 hours later) just take the food from the oven directly to the table.

A brief business meeting followed.

Messrs. and Mmes. Harold Harvey, Mike Bals and Clint Callahan were hosts.

WHAT'S DOING

R. S. Pyle, your Telephone Manager in Torrance

Maintaining phone lines is a never ending job! To keep phone lines ready for your calls, men in Telephone Patrol planes fly along hundreds of miles of phone cable nearly every day. They're on the lookout for construction work or other hazards that might damage underground or overhead lines. They warn anyone on the ground working near cables by dropping notes or calling to them over the plane's loudspeaker system.

You, too, can help protect your service (and your neighbors') by watching out for buried cable if you have occasion to use digging equipment on your property. If you're having a contractor handle the job, it's a good idea to remind him, too.

If you have any questions about the location of a buried cable, just give us a call.

Here's a shortcut to faster phoning. As you can see on this map, Southern California is divided into different telephone calling areas, each with its different Area Code. And these Area Codes are your key to faster service.

For example, if you want to call from the 213 area to a number in the 714 area, please remember to dial the Area Code (714), then the telephone number. Even when you place calls through an Operator, they'll go through faster if you give her the Area Code. On calls within your own area, no Area Code is needed... just dial the phone number.
